Department characteristics:

Under the current situation in which the evolution of domestic and international politics and economy is fluid, DPPA is oriented toward cultivating specialists in policy analysis and administrative management. Compared with the other public administration departments in Taiwan, DPPA retains the essentially fundamental and professional courses, but deletes the courses that are narrowly focused or are incoherent to the direction of the development of this department. In addition, DPPA particularly emphasizes the teaching in local government and regional study within which the latter is a special feature of this university.

In research, problem solving and policy introspection ability enables students to establish their theory foundation. We will try to cultivate students' ability on policy making, policy implementation, and administration management. The most important of all is to upgrade government's administration proficiency. In practical, we wish to strengthen the cooperation and interaction among the government in the central area, local communities, and NGOs. To assist NGOs to promote civil society concept; to assist local communities to create their own special community culture; to assist local government to upgrade its administration capability. In other words, we see ourselves as the think tank of the local government of Central Taiwan. We are expected to go deeper on local development research issues, to arouse local community energy, to reform local government on administration efficiency, and to promote civil society idea.

There are 21 major cities in Taiwan. Nantou County is situated right in the middle of Taiwan and is the only hilly county that does not have a coastline. For a long time, Nantou has been known for its beautiful mountains and pure water. Nantou County is also the area that contains Taiwan’s highest mountain, Yushan, its longest river, the Choshui River, and its biggest high mountain lake, Sun Moon Lake. In spring, people often enjoy lake cruising and flower viewing on Sun Moon Lake and tea-drinking in Luku. The general impression that people have about Puli is its wealth of talents and abundant farm products. In this small town, all year round there are all kinds of cultural activities such as traditional temple fairs, folk shows, cultural exhibitions, musical shows, and song and dance troupes. International and Cross-Strait Affairs Meeting.

A scholarship or financial aid recipient who has full-time employment on or off campus, holds an Alien Resident Certificate for work purposes, or holds an Alien Permanent Resident Certificate during the award period may not receive this incentive. In the event of a violation, the recipient's scholarship or financial aid eligibility shall be revoked. If any overpayment has occurred and is verified, the recipient shall return the incentive already received.

IX.

These Guidelines shall be implemented after approval by the Administrative Meeting and authorization by the University President.

The above regulations were translated from the original Chinese. In the event of any discrepancies between the two versions, the Chinese version shall prevail.
